

Call for Papers Young Journal of European Affairs (YJEA)

The Young Journal of European Affairs (YJEA) is looking for your contributions to its fourth issue in 2024! The YJEA is a student-run academic journal, founded in 2020, and has since successfully published yearly issues, co-organised a student conference, established a blog on EU policy and worked with experienced academics from around the world to provide high quality feedback students would rarely receive elsewhere. We provide you with the opportunity to work with experts in EU affairs and develop key skills for careers in academia and beyond. Would you like to benefit from this experience too? Then submit your manuscript and work with us to share your research with the world!

Is there a deadline for submissions?

There is a priority deadline on the 01. February 2024. If you submit by then, (1) you will have six instead of four weeks for revisions and the chance to better reconcile the publication process with other commitments. (2) You will increase your chances of being published in the fourth issue by giving yourself more time to complete all the necessary revisions in time. (3) Most importantly, as the publication of our fourth issue approaches and we have to choose between articles of similar quality, yours will be prioritised. The main deadline is the 01. April 2024. We recommend submitting by our priority deadline, but no later than the main deadline.

Who can publish and what can be published?

We accept submissions from students currently pursuing a bachelor's or master's degree. Papers submitted by PhD candidates will only be accepted if they were written during their bachelor's or master's studies. Submit your pieces on European politics, mainly but not exclusively, in the following fields of study:

- European Public Policy
- European Integration
- European Foreign, Security and Defence Policy
- European Political Economy
- Global Governance Perspectives on the EU

You will benefit from our double-blind peer-reviewing procedure, which is in line with the highest academic standards of quality assurance and used in most senior journals. The Editorial Board of the YJEA, along with experienced scholars will give you detailed feedback on your work and help guide you through the revision and publication process.

We exclusively accept academic articles. Papers may have been written as, for instance, coursework for university, your bachelor's or master's dissertation or independent work. Please note the format requirements and revision schedule on our website. The review process may take six months or more. Shorter opinion pieces can be submitted for publication on the YJEA blog. Please refer to our website for further information.

For further questions, please refer to board@yjea.org. We are looking forward to working with you on your manuscripts and hopefully publish your work in our next issue!

Supported by Geschwister-Scholl-Institute of Political Science
Ludwig-Maximilians-University Munich

